Title: Listening and Responding to Children's Needs – the importance of low-threshold online support

Speaker: Suada Dani, Support and Youth Expert, Unizon

Abstract:

Introduction: For the last fifteen years Unizon's member organisations have offered low-threshold online support to children and youth with thousands of online support contacts each year, and are thus one of Sweden largest online support services. Their main tasks are to listen, support, empower and help in contact with judiciary and other authorities. In 2020, when other support services limited visitations or closed down due to the pandemic, we extended our online support and went from sixty online support services to over one hundred. The presentation gives an introduction to our online support and collection of data during 2022 from a newly introduced chat service.

Methods: A new chat service for children seeking support and advise online were set up in 2021, named Unizonjourer.se/ung. This chat service allows children to communicate anonymously with a trained support worker in a one-to-one setting. Following each chat conversation, the support worker record child demographics and the nature of the conversation, including type of support, type of topic as well as contact frequency, on a pre-defined proforma in order to enable continuous evaluation of children's needs and service demand. The sample comprised of a total of 2 463 proformas detailing chat conversations with children between the ages 10 to 17 years that contacted Unizonjourer.se/ung in 2022.

Results: Approximately 80 % of the contacts were with girls. 41 % stated that this was the first time contacting the online chat service. Mental health and violence remain the main reasons for children to reach out to Unizonjourer.se/ung. Analysis on child demographics and the nature of the conversations will be presented.

Conclusions: With an increasing number of children seeking support online, the way in which children utilise online chat services is of great interest. Policy and practice impactions will be discussed alongside experiences of the support workers.
